

coruscants*

\ from the Latin verb coruscare meaning to shine, to sparkle.*

Weary of waiting for you in museums or other big international exhibitions, the Coruscant creatures have decided to stroll about the streets to meet you.

During their cheerful and casual walks, these long-distance-wandering horned creatures love to share songs and dances their mahouts collected during previous trips.

They are fine art and brass band lovers and they can suddenly rush into your streets from Nonsense Avenue to Little Treats Alley.

concretely

Three dazzling actors are equipped with a sound-system device and wear amazing inflatable sculpture-puppet costumes.

As periscopic observers they are able to detect the beauty we cannot see, just as well in a row of street lamps as behind a food stand.

And they can sometimes simply accompany those little moments of happiness that punctuate our celebrations.

Every meeting along their route is a reason to take life as it comes.

Their show comes with original and varied live music.

Supposedly tribal music and allegedly contemporary choreography, approximate and interactive feats give rhythm to this amazing performance.
